wholly unwarrantable and unauthorized.

I don't mean we have not as good individual shots, but their organization is simply perfect. Discipline will always beat superior individual strength in such contests. "JOSEPH B. HUMPHREYS,

"Auditor of Hamilton Co., O."

The Chair explained that in so far as the communication referred to the City Clerk, he would state that the Clerk had simply sent a certified copy of the ordinance in the condition in which it was at the time, and that he would have transmitted a certified copy of the ordinance as required by the Code, but the ordinance was and still is in the hands of the Mayor for his action.

ordinance was and still is in the hands of the Mayor for his action.

Mr. Wells moved to refer the communication of the County Auditor to the Finance Committee, in connection with the City Auditor and City Solicitor.

The City Auditor hoped this would be done. He said it was quite evident to him that the County Auditor meant business, and the sooner the subject received proper attention the better, but he hoped the reference would be made "with power to act."

Mr. Wells accepted that, and the motion as amended was carried.

The murderer is Gaetano Guidi, a bar-keeper at the confectionery, twenty-six years old, and is said to have killed a man in Tuscany about two years ago. Guidi has the faile of being a man of hasty and violent temper, and of being continually embrolled in quarreis. At the above mentioned time a daughter of Badrack, about 12 years old, went behind the counter for a glass of ale.

Mr. Winkler stated that the Railroad Committee held the report.

Mr. Dioks stated that the reason he made the motion was because he understood the ordinance was illegal, that was all.

Mr. Voight opposed the reference. He thought the Board ought to consider the right and wishes of the people of Walnut Hills in wanting the railroad.

Mr. Winkler stated that the Railroad of hasty and violent temper, and of being continually embroiled in quaries. At the above mentioned time a daughter of Badrack, about 12 years old, went behind the onjuries he received while returning from a fishing party.

Chief Justice Morris is quite unwell with the chills. He is attended by Dr. W. W. Boyd, whose skillful treatment will bring the Chief Justice to the bench in a two days.

Information has come to light that the publishing house of J. P. Mortou & Co. Both were angry, and the next moment they were engaged in a scuille on the sidewalk. Three or four men standing by were witnesses to the affray but made no effort to quell it, until the up-lifted stiletto was seen raised in the hands of at letto was seen raised in the hands of Guidi. A man named Thompson then seized him by the wrist, but Guidi immediately broke loose from him and plunged the fathi dagger in the neck of Badrack, who was lying on his back unable to defend nimself. The blade, which was seven inches in length, and double edged, entered the neck just at the base, severing the jugular veln and causing immediate death.

As soon as the murderer had accomplished his crime he threw the bloody dagger away and ran down Broadway, out Fourth and down Lawrence street, into Friendsbip alley, below Third, pursued by the bystanders and Officers Sissman, Murphy, Lillis and Butler. Guidi was captured with little trouble and taken to the Hammond-street Station.

The remains of the murdered man were carried into the parlor in the rear of the blood gushing out of the wound in streams.

Coroner Maley visited the house of the murdered man and began to impanel a jury. After viewing the body, he postponed the inquest till this morning to await the result of a post-mortem examination by Drs. Watson and Bramble. Guidi's statement at the Station-house, this morning, was that he had been in the employ of Samuel Badrack for two years as a barkeeper in the confectionery; that he had trouble with Badrack's son, whom he accused of going behind the counter and taking money without his father's consent, and that immediately before the quarrel the murdered man had gone behind the counter, drinking from a bottle, and was ordered out by him, which was the cause of the difficulty. Others say that Guidi made threats to kill some one before morning. The fatal dagger with which he committed the act was a highly finished French blade, engraved with a motto in French—"I ask nothing; I take nothing."

There are also rumors and stories of former ill-feelings and threats between the parties, and of an attempted seduction of Hadrack's sister by Guidi, but as they are only rumors naturally attendant upon affairs of this kind, they need the verification of the Coroner's examination to warrant their publication.
